About From Mao to Mozart

In 1979, Ukrainian-American violinist Isaac Stern made an unprecedented tour of China, the first such tour by a Western musician in a country still reeling from the effects of the Cultural Revolution. On hand to document the historic event was filmmaker Murray Lerner, who gathered footage of Stern's encounters with both traditional Chinese musicians and conservatory students versed in Brahms and Mozart -- encounters that, only a few years prior, would have been politically controversial.

Music at the Movies Testimonial

Hear from an audience member attending the most recent Music at the Movies event, Cadillac Records, hosted by musician George Hunter:

"The Music at the Movies series has introduced us to new films, new music, and, most importantly, new Staunton neighbors with a great deal of talent and passion. It's really cultivated a better understanding of our rich cultural community here."
