

BRING WHO YOU ARE

Recently, the hard work and dedication of the Arcadia Project caught the attention of a giant in the field of preservation, David J. Brown, in the DC area. In his blog article, "Celebrating the Creators," DJB highlighted the remarkable journey of the Arcadia Project and its contribution to the Staunton community.

The Arcadia Project, a non-profit community cultural center, has been on a mission to restore the historic Dixie Theater building on Beverley Street. What makes this project truly special is the community's involvement and support. From stabilizing the building's exterior to securing grants and innovative fundraising campaigns, the Arcadia Project has been a beacon of hope and inspiration for Staunton and beyond.

We were particularly honored to see our very own theater featured in David Brown's article. The recognition of our efforts by such a prominent figure underscores the significance of what we are striving to achieve. It's a testament to the dedication of our team, led by a dynamic board and director, as well as the unwavering support of our community.

One of the highlights mentioned in the article is our innovative fundraising initiative, the chance to Sponsor a Marquee Quote. This unique opportunity allows individuals and businesses to honor a loved one or commemorate a special occasion by sponsoring a quote from a famous creator. It's a beautiful way to inspire others while contributing to the restoration of our beloved theater.

You too can sponsor a quote: Sept, Nov, Dec of 2024 are still available!

We were thrilled to see Candice and David's inspirational message grace the marquee, featuring Mary Oliver's "Instructions for Life." "Pay attention. Be astonished. Tell about it." These words encapsulate the spirit of discovery and celebration that we strive to foster within our community.
